The Crowd Fell Away When the Burglas When Printer Francis C. Leddy started for susiness on Thursday morning he left a small tucked away in the bureau in the back parlor Brooklyn. When he got home in the evening box had disappeared, and his neighbors had a startling story to tell him. The house was temporarily vacant about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, both hirs. Leddy and the servant having gone off in different directions. The passing up stairs was surprised to find a passing up stairs was surprised to find a strange man ransacking the bureau drawers in the back parlor. Before she had recovered from her astonishment the burklar disappeared through the back parlor window and had dropped to the vard from an extension. When he was scaling the fence in the yard the siri was at the front door wildly screaming for the police. Her outery brought several neighbors, and a very lively chase after the fugitive was begun. The pursuers, however, dropped behind one by one, the burgiar having drawn a revolver and kept up a running fire at them. None of the bullets took effect, but the burgiar scared the amateur polleemen so badly that he got away. He was a wiry fellow, about 23 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tail, with sandy complexion and moustache, and he wore dark clothes.

A burgiar also invaded the house of William Wilcox at 491 Eighth street, Brooklyn, in broad daylight on Thursday, Mrs. Wilcox surprised him when he was packing up some elothing on the second floor. He coolly took a wolver from his booket, placed it close to Mrs. Wilcox's bead, and said, "Now keep quiet gill shoot you." Mrs. Wilcox kept very colet, and to her great relief the stranger hurried from the house as quickly as his feet could earry him, leaving all the valuable plunder that he had packed up behind him.

A burgiar also entered the house of Dr. William McCollom at 195 Lefferts place on Thursday and stole $50 worth of silverware. trange man ransacking the bureau drawers

Americans in the Honduras Revolution. New ORLEANS, Nov. 21.-The steamer City of Port Cortez, bringing the latest intelligence of harles F."Hardle, says: "I understood that, Charles F. Hardle, says: "I understood that, though the army of Bogran was victorious, victory was entirely due to the valor of the Americans, who numbered about fifty miners under Major E. A. Burke of New Orleans and James Imboden. We arrived in port on the 11th and left on the 15th. About an hour before we left a telegram was received by Gen. Kraft from President Bogran proclaiming pasce and acknowledging the gratitude of the aution to the Americans for turning the tide in their favor. Gen. Sanchez was not captured in their favor.
